"We're going to inconvenience the government of Nicaragua until they quit" exporting revolution.

The CIA's Nicaraguan mining caper is producing an ironic result: U.S. backed rebels rather than the Sandinista regime may end up as the real victims.

A political storm that struck with the suddenness and fury of a spring tornado has left the Reagan administration's Central America policy in disarray.

Congressional support for the "secret war" against Nicaragua's Sandinista regime shows signs of disintegrating. Further military aid for El Salvador is in jeopardy.

A shift in sentiment among European allies toward greater sympathy for U.S. strategy in Central America has been reversed, with Washington on the moral defensive worldwide.

The damage, in the view of Republican as well as Democratic lawmakers, has been largely self-inflicted by the administration.

Thunderclap. What set off the storm was the disclosure that the Central Intelligence Agency has directly supported the mining of Nicaraguan harbors. Ships of at least six nations, including a Soviet tanker, have been damaged.

While it has been willing to finance an army of anti-Sandinista guerrillas in Nicaragua, congress reacted with indignation to word of the minelaying. The uproar was intensified by the White House's rejection of World Court jurisdictionover a Nicaraguan suit to stop the mining.

The strength of the lawmakers' challenge to the administration was underscored by non-binding resolutions-approved by the Senate and House-calling for an immediate end to the mining.

Before the vote, the White House, in an attempt to limit the political damage, signaled that the mining had been suspended and perhaps terminated. But there was no guarantee that thi would neutralize the revolt against Reagan's Central American policy. The consensus among Capitol Hill observers is that the House will reject a measure providing an additional 21 million dollars in CIA funds to back the anti-Sandinista contras.

Without more money, agency officials say, the guerrillas will have to start pulling out of Nicaragua within several weeks. To bypass a roadblock on arms aid for El Salvador deemed vital by the White House, Reagan has diverted funds from an emergency Pentagon budget.

Why is the controversy over mining suddenly threatening to upset the administration's strategy for Central America?

one explanation: A number of lawmakers, who have supported the secret war in Nicaragua reluctantly, felt that Americaninvolvement in the mining crossed the line of what is morally and legally acceptable.

Senator Barry Goldwater, the venerable republican chairman of the Senate Select Commit tee on Intelligence, issued the strongest protest. In a vitriolic letter to CIA Director William Casey, the Arizona Republican declared that the mining "is an act violating international law. It is an act of war."

Others in Congress were dismayed by the administration's refusal to argue its case before the World Court. It was another Republican senator, David Durenberger of Minnesota, who took the lead in speaking out on this issue:

Minority CPA Firms Conclude Merger

Mitchell/Titus and Company, the nation's largest minority Certified Public Accounting (CPA) firm, announced that it had concluded a merger with Stewart, Benjamin and Brown, third largest minoirty firm in New York City.

It is the first merger of two Black CPA firms in the United States.

The firm, headed by Bert N. Mitchell, Managing Partner, will retain the name of Mitchell/Titus and Company and will continue its principal offices at 1 Park Avenue in New York City, with branch offices in Washington, D.C.

The fast-growing Mitchell/Titus and Company will now have 9 partners, 90 employees and over 500 clients. It's clients include Fortune 500 companies Black Enterprise 100 companies, government agencies, entertainment and sports figures. Among its well-known clients are: Time, Inc. Philip Morris, NAACP, Jackie Robinson FOundation, Phelps-Stokes Foundation, New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation and the Washington, D.C. Transit Authority.

Mitchell/Titus is also one of two companies conducting an audit of the entire State of New York, the largest audit of its kind.

Managing Partner Bert Mitchell, who is also Chairman of the New York State Board of Public Accountacy, said: "Our organization has brought together top professional talent that will enable us to expand areas of specialization such as taxes, financial planning, management consulting and increased utilization of high technology

We will compete favorable with the larger non-minority firms."

Robert Stewart, Managing Partner of Stewart, Benjamin and Brown, said: "We have competed with Mitchell/Titus for several years, and have watched their operation grow They are consummated professionals with high standards of performance This merger is most advantageous to our clients because it pools a significantly large number of professional accountants and financial planners to provide more comprehensive services"

BULGING PRISONS

From dingy, fortresslike state penitentiaries erected in the last centruy to ultramodern lockups built only yesterday, an overflow of inmates is rekindling a national debate over crime and punishment.

The issue: Do longer prison terms really curb lawbreaking? Or do they all too often seal socially redeemable persons into lives of crime?

Bringing the dispute to a head is an unprecedented population explosion behind prison wals. A Justice Department survey released in early April found a record 438,830 persons serving prison terms. An estimated 210,000 more were inlocal jails awaiting trial or doing time for minor infractions. In all, I of every 350 Americans was behind bars - one of the highest such ratios in the world.

The cost to taxpayers runs to 10 billion dollars a year $16,000 or more per inmate - at a time when government budgets are severely pinched. "Crowding in prisons and jails is a national problem of epidemic proportion," warns a study prepared for the Justice Department

It is true that crime seems to be edging downward after rising through most of the '60s and 70's. Yet U.S. crime rates remain among the steepest in the world. Meanwhile, the prison-crowding crisis is having this impact:

States are frenetically building new prisons and jails, with as much as 6 billion dollars' worth of construction under way or on the drawing boards.

Prisons are becoming more dangerous places, aggravating some inmates' violent tendencies at a time when researchers are questioning the effect of long terms on crime rates.

Judges-recognizing that institutions already built are over capacity-are devising ways to punish manynonviolent criminals without sending them to prison.

Federal and state lawmakers are beginning to overhaul sentencing codes--this time with an eye tomaking penalties more uniform while limiting inmate totals.

Philosophical dispute. The turmoil over what to do with the convict surplus marks another turn in a long-running controversy, In 19th-century America, there were few felons. Those who weren't hanged were routinely sent to prison to do hard labor or sit idle until their terms expired. But authorities by the 1920s had come to believe criminals could be rehavilitated, so states adopted sentences that allowed release of a prisoner when he was deemed ready to return to society.

By the 1970s, conventional wisdom in the corrections field had changed agin. Rehabilitation had gotten a bad name as citizens outraged by fast-rising crime rates protested against what they saw as lenient treatment of criminals. One state after another enacted laws cracking down on wrongdoers." "We've toughened more than 100 statutes in five years," boasts Colorado State Senator Cliff Dodge.

Most states extended prison terms for a long list of crimes. The power of parole boards to release prisoners early on the basis of good behavior and their expected ability to find work was abolished in nine states.

Other new statutes curbed "good time," a system that allows convicts to cut their terms by a third or more if they obey prison rules.

HAVE YOU BELIEVED OUR REPORT?
SERIES #40
ISAIAH 53: 1& 2

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a root out of dry ground.

He hath no form nor comiliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

WORD OF WISDOM
ISAIAH 55:1-10

HO, Every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, andhe that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk wihout money and without price

Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness

Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David

Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people

Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near:

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord.

For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts

For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that is my give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater

So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth; it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it

Diploma Mills

Ellie McGrath and associates, gives the following report in Time Magazine about bogus or phony degrees. The report shows that one Sassafras Herbert proudly displays her handsome diploma from the American Association of Nutrition and Dietary Consultants The certificate entitles Herbert to a listing in the Official Directory of Nutrition and Dietary Consultants and special rates for malpractice insurance.

The latter benefit is a good thing, because Sassafras is an eleven-year-old poodle Her owner, Victor Herbert, a New York City physician, bought the diploma for $50 to prove a point. Says he: "Something that looks like a diploma doesn't mean that somebody has responsible training."

The business of selling bogus degrees to people seeking to boost their egos, or more likely their job prospects, is growing. The FBI estimates that there are at least 100 diploma mills in the U.S. selling 10,000 to 15,000 phony sheepskins a year. No book study or taking of exams is required. In fact, most of these counterfeit colleges demand little more than a fee for a degree (usually a few thousand dollars for a B.A., or D.D., and up to $5,000 for a Ph. D.).

In particular, the phony schools are flourishing in Southern and Western states where college regulation is weak or not rigorously enforced. Thus, someone can open an office, cal its a university, and without faculty or curriculum begin mailing out degrees for a price

Four years ago this multi-million-dollars business came under the eye of the FBI, the U.S Post Office and the Internal Revenue Service. Since then, in an investigation dubbed "Dipscam", more than twenty diploma mills have been closed down and a few operators have been sent to jail.

Charles Alfred Durham, 54, of Seneca, South Carolina, who has been charged with mail fraud, in connection with three diploma mills, has a clever defense that the diplomas, costing up to $940 for a doctorate, were only "expensive novelties." His lawyers says, "People who bought these diplomas are often partners in fraud

Many buyers were simply naive, believing that a mail-order diploma can certify what has not been learned in a classroom. A night security guard in Temple, Texas, says he bought a B.A. inlaw enforcement from Southwestern University in Tucson for $500 in 1982 because he "wanted something to hang on my wall and fee proud about '

As long as it is easier to buy false honor, rather than merit true honor; and as long as one's ego demands false honor, to satisfy that craving, or lust, for recognition, diplomas and degrees, of little or no worth, will yet be sold- and those who cannot earn them, will continue to buy them

Maybe I am wrong, and if I am, I solicit correction. I believe that each degree holder should have a genuine point of matriculation. I also believe that he should know the difference between a diploma that is an award, and a degree that is a reward. There is no difference! The former is for service or money, without required knowledge; the latter is an academic accomplishment. The former is a novelty, which can only serve as a showpiece, or a collector's item; the latter can earn for it's owner a professional livelihood, and a perpetual state of proficiency

Results Of Welfare Cuts Damaging

When the budget cutters went after the federal welfare program in the 1981 massacre of social programs, we were assured that the truly needy would be spared, and that hardships would be limited.

Then, when there was no mass movement of the working poor to quit their low-paying jobs and go back on the welfare rolls, many observers said that proved the cuts were wise.

Nothing could be futher from the truth. The fact that the working poor stayed on their jobs simply indicates how strong the work ethnic is among poor people. Apparently the wealthy were presumed to need hugh tax incentives to work, but the poor who had their small benefits cut or eliminated stayed on the job.

But their sacrifices have been great, and the toll in damaged health and poor nutrition will hurt the nation far into the future.

The government's General Accounting office recently surveyed the effects of the welfare cuts and the picture is not a pretty one.

Some 493,000 families were cut from welfare rolls because of the 1981 changes in the law. Those families included about one million children. Another 300,000 families, most of them headed by working women, stayed on welfare, but with reduced benefits.

In addition, most of those dropped from welfare also lost their eligibility for Medicaid and food stamps. So hundreds of thousands of families were left with less cash and lost food and health care assistance during the most severe recession since the war.

The GAO study documents the government-imposed hardship on those families. The GAO invetigation found that the biggest blow was felt among families that relied on welfare help to supplement below-poverty wageas.

On average in the cities studied, the families lost anywhere from $71 to $198 each month -- a large part of the total family income. Among those that stayed on welfare, benefits were cut from $46 to $137 per month.

After being dropped from welfare, the working poor lost Medicaid. Many report they now do not seek treatment for health problems or dental problems because they can't afford to pay for the care.

What that means is that, in addition to neglecting medical problems that should be cared for, hugh numbers of children are not getting the routine checkups and monitoring they need to assure prevention of health problems.

And uncared-for illnesses become life-threatening chronic conditions that will ultimately cost the government far more that it saves on mean-spirited cuts now. The same holds for dropping poor families from food stamps and nutrition aid. We're setting ourselves up for massive fiscal costs in the future as a result of squeezing the poor.

Most of the dropped from the rolls are working longer and harder and even making more money than in 1981. But inflation and the loss of welfare and related aid leave them farther behind than they were.

The bottom line is not how much the government saved by its cuts, but how much poverty was increased by those cuts. And the numbers of the poor almost doubled in the past three years, due largely to the lethal combination of high unemployment and federal social program cuts.

The slashing of the safety net is not irreversible. New policies can mend it and once again restore some semblance of assistance to those who need it.

Any long-term economic policy has to meet the needs of the poor, needs that include jobs and job training, a minimum income level consistent with a modest but decent living standard, and health and nutrition assistance.

Whats Going On?

An unborn child, an eight-month old fetus, is already addicted to heroin. This is the second unborn child that a Chicago woman has abused because of her own heroin habit.

While the current fetus was being fed from the poisonous drugs of its mother's body. Marvin Gaye was shot to death in Los Angeles on April Fool's Day, the eve of the anniversary of his Aires miracle 45 years ago.

Not only were the circumstances tragic, but the fact that his own father shot him gave the event an even more bizarre twist. However, Marvin Gaye's body carried the marks of a societal failure that is reaching into the enclaves of the rich and famous, as well as into the bodies of junkie mothers, and destroying life -- even before it begins.

A police source, reported the Los Angeles Herald Examiner, said, "There's already a little bit of evidence that suggests that he'd (Gaye) been using cocaine lately. Apparently, the left nostril was rather detroyed."

It's called a "deviated septum." The membrane that separates the nostrils has been burned away and there is a hole in the passage. Which is why you can notice a cocaine user sniffling freguently. Only expensive plastic surgery can repair the condition, but even with that extreme remedy, cocaine can never be used again.

"Also, one of his pinky fingernails was extremely long. Those two things suggest that he (Gaye) was still in the drug culture," the police source added.

"Marvin had a drug problem. At one point he told me he wanted to break the habit. He went four days (without drugs), and then one of his friends brought him some without being asked," Deborah Derrick, Gaye's 22-year-old girlfriend, said.

Rev. Marving Gaye Sr., whose son added a small "e" to the family name when he became a professional singer, admits that he shot his son. He also claims that his son was using cocaine heavily during this period and had frequent bizarre outbursts.

"He turns into something like a beastlike person (when he uses cocaine). I heard him all the time -- the sniffing," the 70-year-old father added.

Gaye's father described him as a troubled man, prone to violent outbursts and obsessed with the fear that someone was trying to kill him. At the time of his death, an assault and battery lawsuit by Carole Pinon Cummings, an ex-girlfriend, hung over his head.

"He was paranoid that someone was going to kill him. He thought everybody was after him," Gaye's father said.

Derrick describes Gaye as a man in his own prison. "He stayed in his room (at his parent's home)....Every night he would check the outer gate to the house, then the locks and windows and he slept with a gun under his bed every night."

While Gaye lived at the home of his parents -- where he also died -- pushers andhustlers swarmed over the house. It was drugs all night, People magazine reported.

Marving Gaye had tried to kill himself with cocaine before "by ingesting more than a gram in less than an hour," People said.

But given half a chance, cocaine will kill you.

It perfers, however, to do it the painful, tedious way. Cocaine works on your mind; you become suspicious and paranoid. And your soul is dying along with your mind and body.

Marving Gaye is not the exception; he is simply conspicuous.

Elected officials, athletes, executives, scholars and other celebrities have also become victims of a new middle-class junkie culture.

"What's Going on?" Marvin Gaye asked the country in 1971. His protest album was, of course, questioning poverty, Viet Name and pollution.

Poverty hasn't destroyed us, and neither did the Viet Nam war nor pollution. But drugs --especially the silent killer cocaine -- is wreaking havoc and turning this society into a middle-class "shooting gallery."

I was in Los Angeles the day Marving Gaye was buried. I was interviewing one of the biggest names in the movie industry.

And with all of his money and fame he admitted that drugs had claimed him also. He was taking it "a day at a time."

If this is success -- "What's Going On?"

Victims Of Reaganomics Or?

The recent killings of Robert Baldwin, a tenant at Yesler Terrace, and Michael Raburn, a King County policeman sent to evict Bladwin for owing just over $100 in back rent, is a tragedy whose roots reach all the way to Ronald Reagan's doorstep. Baldwin, like many others feeling the effects of federal cutbacks, had been unable to find a job for several years. Furthermore, despite being arrested a year ago for pointing an unloaded rifle at another policeman sent to evict him, Bladwin was released from custody without receiving the mental care he obviously needed.

Instead of funneling billions into tax cuts for the rich, repressive regimes from chile to South Africa, lasers to wag war in space, first strike missiles in Europe and new chemical weapons, the Reagan administration should be providing full employment and desperately needed social services (such as mental health care). If there were full employment and adequate social services, both Robert Baldwin and Michael Raburn would be alive today.

The upside down priorities of the Reagan administration are leading to a deepening social crisis, especially for Black people. Last year in King County, 1800 people were evicted. Many were Black and poor. Their numbers will rise as unemployment increases. How many more Yesler Terrace shoot-outs will there be?

All of us feel the effects of federal cutbacks directly or indirectly. The Yesler Terrace shoot-out is only one example. The way to end these cut-backs of essential human services and the high unemployment rate of Black people is to dump Reagan and his policies in November 1984. To do this, every eligible person must register and vote.

In the meantime, the Seattle Housing Auth must be pressured to change its eviction procedures so that tenants who are a week late in paying their rent do not receive eviction notices and so that those who are mentally disturbed or who are simply too poor to pay are not evicted at all. Also, the Seattle Police Department must revise its use of deadly force so that never again will two people end up dead over little more than $100. Furthermore, the police must explain why it was necessary to shoot Baldwin more than 30 times, why the police fired so many rounds in a populated area, how Baldwin was shot in the back when, according to police, he had lunged at officers, and why police rejected the efforts of Reverend Harold Haley, a retired police officer known to Baldwin, to get Baldwin to surrender. Clearly, the police did not intend for Baldwin to leave his apartment alive.

The killing of Robert Baldwin fits into a long pattern of racist violence against Black people perpetrated by police officers and prison guards. This pattern must be broken.

Come To Church Services

PSALMS 103:1-20

BLESS the Lord, O my soul; and all that is within me, bless his holy name.

Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits;

Who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases;

Who redeemeth thy life from destruction; who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies;

Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things; so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.

The Lord executeth righteousness and judgment for all that are oppressed.

He made known his ways unto Moses, his acts unto the children of Israel.

The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy.

He will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger for ever.

He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.

For as the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy toward them that fear him.

As far as the east is from the west, so far nath removed our transgressions from us.

Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him.

For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust.

As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flouri-sheth.

For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place therof shall know it no more.

But the mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children.

To such as keep his covenant, and to those that remember his commandments, hearkening unto the voice of his word.

Bless ye the Lord, all ye his hosts; ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure.

Food

Tacoma Facts wouldn't dream of trying to sabotage your diet but when you find out that Luscious Chocolate Strawberry Cake has only 249 calories per serving, you may be tempted to sample a piece. It's a spectacular dessert and it's worth every calorie.

Lucious Chocolate Strawberry Cake

1 (18.5 oz.) package chocolate cake mix
2 pints strawberries
½ c. granulated sugar
1 pint REAl whipping cream
3 T. powdered sugar
1 T. vanilla extract

Heat oven to 350°F. Prepare mix according to package directions. Pour into three greased and floured 9-inch cake pans. Bake 25-30 minutes. Cool in pan 10 minutes then remove and cool right side up. Wash strawberries and remove hulls. Reserve 1 cup berries for garnish. Halve remaining berries, mix with granulated sugar. Cover and regrigerate at least 20 minutes. Whip cream until thick, add powdered sugar and vanilla, whip until stiff. Set aside 2½ cups cream. Fold cut berries into remainder. Place a cake layer on plate. Spread with half the berry and whipped cream mixture. Repeat. Center third layer on top. Spread reserved whipped cream over top and sides. Decorate cake using additional whipped cream if desired. Garnish with reserved berries. Serves 12, approximately 249 calories per serving.

PLU Provides Transition From High School

Middle College, a six-week program to ease transition from high school to college, will be offered at Pacific Lutheran University June 23-Aug. 3.

The program, now in its sixth year, provides eight to 10 hours of transferable academic credit while increasing student's chances of college success, according to program coordinator Dr. Judith Carr.

Middle College concentrates on courses basics to success in college - writing and study skills and math - plus history, biology, communication arts and computer science, she indicated.

"By the first day of fall semester, they know how to survive in a university," she continued. "They start ahead of the pack and maintain the lead all year."

Students learn to express themselves precisely, know what to look for when they read, and how to work with words and numbers easier, she added.

Financial aid based on need is available. Deadline for application is May 1. For more information call 535-7130.

PLAY TO W-I-N "CASH WORD"

Here's how you can be a "CASH WORD" winner.

Scratch all 9 "Dollar" ($) signs on the ticket. Spell "WIN" in any row (left to right) or any column (top to bottom) to win the prize shown.

You could win $50,000, $1,000, $25, $5, $2 or a Free Ticket instantly. There are up to $11,250,000 in instant prizes to be won by lucky "CASH WORD" players.

Win millions with nonwinning tickets!

Mail 5 nonwinning "CASH WORD" instant game tickets (regular mail only please) in an envelope with your name, address and telephone number (printed legibly on one or more tickets, or on a separate sheet of paper) to:

"CASH WORD"
Grand Prize Drawing
Tacoma, Washington 98455

Enclose only one entry (5 nonwinning tickets) and one name or address per envelope. Approximately 250 envelopes will be drawn each week from the entries received and these will be included in the Grand Prize Finalist Drawing at the end of the game. Entries not drawn will be destroyed. Enter as often as you like.

Millions of winners!

In the "CASH WORD" Instant Game, on the average, better than one in five tickets wins a prize, and better than one ticket in ten wins cash. All net Lottery proceeds benefit the people of Washington.

Lost Or Stolen Tax Refunds Can Be Traced

If a taxpayer suspect that their federal tax refund check may be lost or stolen, the taxpayer should contact the Internal Revenue Service to take the necessary steps to receive the check, said Michael J. Quinn, Seattle IRS District Director.

At least ten weeks must have passed since the tax return was filed before contacting the IRS to inquire about an overdue tax refund. The

For additional information on tax refunds or to obtain a Form 3911, call the Internal Revenue Service at 442-1040 in Seattle, or toll-free 1-800-424-1040.
